

The first Booke conleyning the X. first persecutions,

Eulalia geueh
the oner, denyng to sacrifice to devils.

Eulalia kept secret by her parents.

Eulalia disappro-ueh the Heathen ludge.

The godly confession of Eulalia.

Eulalia allured with faire persuasions.

to gene a charge vpon this so great, and disordered a bat-tayle: and so she, silly wocman, pouring our the bowels of her innocent hart before God, more prouoketh therby the torce and rage of her enemies agaynst her. But the godly care of her parents, fearing least the wouling munde of the Daniel, so ready to dye for Chrestes cause, might make her guilty of her owne death, hid her and kept her close at their house in the countrey, being a great way out of the City.
She yet multyking that quiet life, as also detesting, to make such delay, softly lealech out of the doores (no man knowing therof) in the night and in great hast leaueing the common waye, openeth the hedge gappes, and with verye feete (god knoweth) passed through þ thorny & bryery places, accompanied yetto spirituall gardes: although darke & deadfull was the silent night, yet had shee with her the Lord & guider of light. And as the chiliden of Israel com-ming out of Egyp, had by the myghtye power of God, a cloudy piller for their guide in þ day, & a flame of fire in the night, so had this godly virgyn, traelling in this darke night, when she feng & forlaking the place where alithy idolatry abounder, & hastened her heauenly journey, was not oppresyd with the deadfull darknes of the night. But yet she before the day appeared in this her speedy journey, with her selfe considered & mused on a thousand matters, & more. In the moring became with a bold courage she goeth unto the tribunall or judgement seat, & in the midst of them all with a loud voice, crying out sayde: I praye you what a shame is it for you thus rashely, and without aduise to destroy and kill mens soules, and to thowre their bodies aline against the rocks, and cause them to deny the omnipotent god? would you know (O you unfortunate) who I am? behold, I am one of the Christians: an enemie to your dewilish sacrifices, I spurne your idols vnder my feete: I confess God omnipotent with my hart and mouth. Iesus, Apollo, and Venus, what are they? Max-iminus himselfe, what is he? The one a thing of naught, for that they be þ workes of mens hands, þ other but a cast away because he worshippeth the same worke. Therfore strinolous are they both, and both not worthy to be set by.
Maximus is a Lorde of substaunce, and yet he himselue falleth downe before a stone, and pouerth the hono: of hys dignite vnto those that are much inferior to his vassals.
Why then doth he oppresse so tirannically, more worthye stomacks and courages then himselfe? He must needs be a good quide, and an upright judge, which fedeth upon innocent bloud: and brething in the bodies of godly men doth rent and teare their bowels, and that moxe is, hath his delight in destroying and subuerting the faþh.

So therfore thou hangman, burne, cut and mangle thou these earthly mebers. It is an easie matter to breake a brittle substance, but the inward mind shal not thou hurt for any thing thou canst do. The pretor, the o: judge wþch these wordes of hers, set in a great rage, laþh, hangmatake her and pull her out by the heare of her head & torment her to the determost. Let her feele the power of our countrey gods, and let her know what the Imperiall governement of a Prince is. But yet, O thou stury gire, tame woulde I haue thee (if it were possible) before thou dye, to reuoke this thy wickednes. Behold what pleasures thou maiest enjoy by the honorabile house thou cameſt of. Thy fallen house and progenie followeth thee to death with lamentable tears, & the heavy nobility of thy kindred maketh dol-full lamentation for thee. What meanest thou, wſt thou kill thy ſelfſo younge a flower, & ſo neare these honorabile ma-ri-a ges and great dowries that thou mayest enioy? Doth not the glittering and golden pompe of the hyed bed moue thee? Doth not the reverende piecie of thyne Amicitours picke thee: whom is it not, but that this thy rashnes and weakenes ſoroweth: behold here the furniture ready prepared for thy terrible death. Either haſt thou be beheaded with this ſword, or ele with theſe wild beaſtes haſt thou be pulled in peeces, or els þ being caſt into the fierie flames haſt thou (although lamentably bewailed of thy friends and kinſfolks) conuited to aſhes. What great matter is it for thee I pray thee, to escape at this? If thou wilt but take & put with thy fingers a little salt & incense into the censers, thou haſt be deliuere from al theſe puniſhments. To this Eulalia made no aunſtwe, but being in a great iuyce theſe ſpirittch in the treamantes face, ſhe throweth downe the Id-oles, and ſpurneth abroad with her ſeete the heape of incenſe prepared to the censers: then without further delay, the haſtinen with both their strengthes tolke her, & pulde one ioynte from an other, and with the talantes of wilde beaſtes, ſcotted her ſides to the haſt bodes: ſhe all this while ſinging and prayſing God in this wiſe. Beholde, O Lord I will not forget thee: what a pleasure is it for them O Chrift that remember thy triumphant victories, to at-ayne unto theſe high dignities, and ſtill calleth vpon that holy name, al ſtained and embried with her owne bloude.

This lang we wþch a bold ſtomacke, neither lamentingly nor yet weepingly, but being glad and mery, abandoning from her mind all heauines and griefe, when as on a ſtaſt warne fountain her mangled members with fresh bloude bathe her whyte and layre ſkinne. Then proceſſe they to the laſt and final torment, which was not only the goring and wounding of her mangled body with the þroughe, & hurdle, and terrible harrowing of her ſeþh, but burned, on every ſide with flaming torches her tormentid hells, and ſides: her heare hanging about her ſhoulders in two parts deuided (wherewith her ſhameleſt chalſtie and virgynitie was couered) reached downe to the ground: but when the cracking flame fleeth about her face, kindled by her heare, and reacheth the crowne of her head: the ſhe deliuering ſwift death, opened her mouth and ſwallowed the flame, and ſo reſted ſhee in peace.

The lady Prudepius and Ado, alſo Equilinus adde moreouer, wyrtinge of a white dove issuing out of her mouth at her departing, and of the fire quenched about her body, alſo of her body couered miraculoſly with ſnow, with other things more, wherof let every reader vſe hys owne iudgement.

As ye haue heard now the Christian life and conſtant death of Eulalia, much worthye of paſte & commendation: So no leſſe commendation is worthye to be giuen to bleſed Agnes, that conſtant Damsell and martir of God, who as ſhe was in Rome of honorabile parents begotten, ſo lyeth ſhe there as honorably intombed & buried. Whiche Agnes for her vnspotte & vndefiled virginitie, deserueth no greater paſte and commendation, then for her willing death and martirdome. Some writers make of her a long diſcourse, more in my iudgement then necessary, reciting diuers & ſundry ſtrange miracles by her done in the pro-ceſſe of her hiftory, which partly for tediousnes, partly for the doubtfullnes of the authour, (whome ſome father vpon Ambroſe) and partly for the ſtrangenes and increvabilitie therof I omit, being ſatſiſhed with that which Prudentius, bryſly writeth of her, as foloweth: ſhee was (ſayth hee) yong & not mariageable, when firſt ſhe being dedicated to Chrift, boldly refuted the wicked ſedities of the Emperor: leſt that through idolatry ſhe might haue denied and forſaken the holy faþh: but yet her proued by diuers & ſundry politices to induce her to the ſame (as now with þ flattering and iuiling wordes of the Judge, now with the threatnings of the ſtormy executioner) ſteode nowyþſtanding, ſtedfast in al courageous strength: and willingly offered her body to hard & painful tormentes, not refuting as the layd, to ſuffer whatſeuer it woulde be, reaþough it were death it ſelue. Then laid the cruel tyrant: it ſto ſu-ſfer paine & torment, be ſo calie a matter and lightly rege-ardeſd of thee & that thou accompreſt thyſe nothing worth: þer þ shame of thy dedicated or vowed virginitie is a thing moxe regarded I know, and eſteemed of thee. therfore this is determined, that vntles thou wile make obeſtaunce to the auſtar of Minerua, and alſo forgiuenes of her for thy arrogancy, thou ſhalt be ſent or abandoned to the comon ſtuers or brothel houſe. Agnes þ virgynie, with more ſpirit and veheſency inueicheth againſt both Minerua & her verginitie: the youth in ſcups flocke and runne together, and crane that they may haue Agnes their ludibrious pray: the faþh Agnes, Chrift is not ſo forgetfull of thoſe that be hys, that he wil ſuffer violently to be taken fro them their golden and pure chalſtie, neither wil he leauē them ſo deli-uite of helpe: he is altoaies at hande and ready to fight for ſuch as are ſhamfast and chalſt virgynes, neither ſuſtereth he his giftes of holy integritie or chalſtie to be polluted.
Thou ſhalt layrh ſhee, willingly bathe thy ſwoorde in my bloude if thou wile, but thou ſhalt not defile my body with ſtichy luſt for any thing thou canſt doe. She had no ſoner ſpoken theſe wordes, but he commaundeth that ſhe ſhould be ſet naked at the corner of ſome ſtreete, (whiche place at that time, ſuch as were ſtrumpets commonlie uſed, the greater part of the multitude both loſlowing and ſhawing to ſee to ſhametis a ſight, went their waies, ſome turninge their headeſ, ſome hidin their faces. But one amongſt þ reſt, with uncircumciſed eies, beholding the Damsell, and that in ſuch opprobrious wife: beholde a flame of fire lyke vnto aла ſluſh of lightning, falch vþp him, ſtrikeſt his eies out of his head, wherupon he for dead falling to the ground, ſpraueth in the chanel durt, whiche companiones taking hym up, & carrying hym away, bewayled hym as a dead man.
But the virgin for this her miraculoſe deliuerie from the danger and shame of that place, ſingeth prayſes unto God and Chrift.

There be (ſayth Prudentius) that report how that ſhee þeyng

Eulalia
ſingeth, and prayſeth God in her tormentes.

Eulalia
put in the fire.
The end and marty-dome of Eulalia.

Ex Pruden-

Agnes martyr.

Straunge
and vñe-ceſſary mirac-cles omitted.

Ex Pruden-
ſib. de Coronis.

Agnes con-ſtant in the confession of her faþh.

Agnes
threaſted to the brothelhouſe.

Agnes
bold vþ the helpe of Christ.

The incontinent eyes of a young man beholding Agnes ſtrukene, out.