set forth: Albeit, through theyr wily and subtle sophistications, they haue induced you (as it happened to manye other worthy princes besides you) to coaduict and assent unto thē: as the rulers perwaded Darus beyngh otherwise a wise and a just prince, to cast Daniel vnto y Lyonys.

It was never bneficial for a good prince to correct & reforme cruel and rigorous lawes (as it is comonly said) to haue a second viewe and ouerlight of things before passed and decreed.

The wise Athenians made a Decree when the Citrye of Miletene was recovered, which before had forsaken the that all the Citizens there shoulde be slayn, and the citry vtterly destroyed. Wherupon there was a ship sent forth with the same commaundement to the armye. On the nexte morrow the matter was brought agayne before the same iudges, and after better advise taken, there was a contrary decree made, that the whole multitude shoulde not be put to y sword, but a fewe of the chiche authors of theyr rebellion, should be punished and the Citry sauied. There was therefore an other ship sent forth to a countermanē in all hast to ouertake and preuent theyr former ship, as also it happened. Neither was that noble citry which then ruled and reigned farre and wide, ashamed to altar and reforme their former Decree. Many such examples there be, the most part wherof, I am sure are wel knowne unto you. But in the Churche especially, Princes haue many times altered & reformed their Decrees, and Habuchodonosor & Darus.
There was a Decree set forth in the name of Allucius, concerning the killing of the Jewes. That Decree was afterwardes called in again. So did Adrianus and Antoninus also correct and reforme their Decrees.

Therefore, although there be a decree set forth in England, which thecarne strange punishments and penalities, disagreeing from the custome of the true Churche, and swarming from the rules & Canons thereof; yet I thought it not untemely for vs to become petitioners unto you, for the mitigation of these your sharpe and sevēre p[ro]cedings.
The which when I consider, it greeveth my munde, not only for the perill and daunger of them which professe the same doctrine that we doe, but also I doe lament for youre cause, that they shoulde make you an instrument and a minister of their bloudye tyrannie and impiecie. And partly also I lament, to see the course of Christian doctrine per-uerred, superstitious rutes confirmed, whoredome and lecherous lustes maintained.

Besides al this, I here of diuers god me, excelling boch in doctrine and vertue, to be theret detained in prisone, as Latimer, Cromer, Shaxton and others, to whom I wish strength, patience, & consolation in the Lord. Unto whom alive it there can nothyng haphe more luckily or more gloriously, then to gene their lues in the confession of the manifest truth and verite: yet would I wyl that you shoulde not distaine your handes with the bloude of such incme: neyther woulde I wyl such Lanternes of lyght in youre Churche, to be extinguished: neither these sytfull & malicious Pharieis, the enemies of Christ, to haue their wils so muche fulfiled. Neither againe woulde I wyl that you shoulde so muche serue the will and desire of that Romishe Antichrist, which laugheth in his sleeve to see you nowe to take part with him, against vs hoping well by the helpe of his bishops, to recover againe his former possesyon, whych of late by your vertuous and godly meanes be lost. He seeth your Bishops, for the tyme, loyall unto you, and obsequious to obey your wil: but in heart he seeth them linked unto him in a perpetuall bond of fidelite and obedience. In all these seates and practises, the Romishe Bishops are not to seeke. They see what great stornes and blastes heretofore they haue passed by bearing & sufferinge. They see that great things be hydron to passe in tyme. Neither doe they forget the olde verse of the Proete.

Multa, dies variisque labor mutabilis eti Retulit in melius.

Manye god and learned men in Germanie concineid of you great hope, that by your authoritie and example other princes also woulde be prouoked to surreaste likewise from their vniust crucifie, and better to advise them selues for the reformation of errors crept into the Churche: trusting that you woulde be as a guide and Captaine of that godly purpose and enterprise. But nowe seeing these your contrary proceedings, we are dretfully discouraged: the indignation of other Princes is confirmed: the stubbornesse of the wicked is augmented: and olde and great errors are thereby stablished.

But heere your Bishops will say agayne (no doubt) that they defende no errors, but the very truthe of Gods holy wordes. And although they be not ignorant that they strive in very dede, both against the true word of God, and the Apostolike Churche, yet like craftie Sophisters, they can finde out faire gloses, pretending a godly shewe outwardly, to colour their errors and abusis.

And this sophistacation not onely now in England is had in great admiration, and esteemed for great wisedom, neither in Rome only raigneth, where Latonal Countertenus, Hadolot, and Cardinall Pole, goe about to payare out abuses wth newe colours and godly gloses: but also in Germany diuers noble men are like wise corrupted and seduced to the like sophistacation. And therefore I nothing maruell that so manye there wth you bee deceaved wth these craftie jaggings. And al though you for your partie, lacke neyther learning nor judgement, yet somē times to see it so happen, that wise men also be carried away by faire and colourable persuasions, from the verite. The saying of Simonides is praze worthy: Opinion (sayeth he) manye times perverteth verite. And many times falso opinion hath outwardly a fairer shewe, then simple truthe. And specially it so happeneth in cases of religion, where y deme trans-formeth himselfe into an Angel of light, setting forth with all colourable & godly shewes, false opinions. Howe faire seemeth the glōe of Samolatenus, vpon the Holypell of S. John: In the beginning was the word, &c. and yet is it null of impicit, but I omitte foraine examples.

In these articles of yours, how many thinges are crately & deceitfully devised? Confession sayth the article, is ye cessary, & ought to be retayned. And why say they not plainly, that the rehaersing & numbring vp of sines is necessary, by Gods word: This the bishops knew wel to be very false, & therfore in the article they placed their wordes generally, to bleare y eies of the simple people, that whe they heare confess ion to be necessary, they shuld thereby think the enumeration of sines to be necessary by Gods wordes.

The like legerdimaine also they use in the article of pri-uate Masses, albeit the beginning the sayd article conteyn-eth a manifest vñtruth, where they say that it is necessary to retayne priuate Masses. What man in ali the primitive Churche, more then 4. hundred yeres after the Apostles time, did ever so say or thinke, at what tyme there were no suche priuate Masses vied? But afterwarde in the processe of the Article, folowe other diuers sophistacations, to make the people beleue that they shuld receive by them, diuine consolacions and benefites. And why doe they not plainely declare what consolacions and benefites those be? The Bishops here do name no application and merite, for they knowe that they can not be defended. Yet they daily wth glosing wordes, wherby they may wnde out and escape, if any shoulde improue their application. And yet notwithstanding they woulde haue this their application to be understanded and beleued of the people. They woulde haue this Idolatrous perswasion continued: to wite, that thy sacrifice doth merite vnto others, remission A poena & culpa: release of all calamities, and also gaine & luktur in common frastice, and to conclude, what soever els the carefull heart of man doth desire.

The lyke Sophistacation they use also, where they say that Priestes mariage is against the law of God. They are not ignoraunte what S. Paule sayth: A Bishop oughte to be the husband of one wife: and therfore they knowe right well that Marriage is permited to Priestes by the law of God.
But because nowe, they say, they haue made a wove, they goe craftely to worke, and doe not say that priestes for their woves sake can not marrie, but plainlye gene out the Article after this sorte: that Marriage of Priestes is vtterly against the lawe of God. Againe, what impudencie and ty-rany do they shew moxouer, when they compell maria-ges to be dissolved, and command those to be put to death, whych will not put away their wives, and renounce their matrimonie: wher as the vow of Priestes, if it had any force at all shoulde exten no further but onely to put them from the ministerie if they woulde mary. And this (no doubt) is the true meaninge of the Councils and Canons.

O cursed Bishops. O impudent and wicked winchester, who under these colourable fetches, thinncketh to deceue the eyes of Christ, and the iudgements of all the godly in the whole wold. These things haue I wyttest that you may understande the crafty sleights, and so ofte of the purpose and policie of these Bishops. For if they woulde simply and harteley search for the truthe, they woulde not use these craftie collusions and deceiptful mugglings.

This Sophistacation, as it is in all other affaires pernitious and odious, so aboue al things, most specially it is to be auoyded in matters of Religion: wherein it is a heinous impyty to corrupt or pervert the pure word of God.
And heereof the Devil whiche is called Diabolus, specially takeith his name, because he wastrash the word of God out of menes hearts by such false juggling and sophistical cauillations. And why do not these Bishops as well plainely utter and confess that they wll abide no reformation of

The Bishops
